GRIDLY.CASA

Know what you own and where it actually is

Inventory, floor plan, QR codes and printouts — in one file that works with no internet.

Launching on Kickstarter — mid-November

THE PROBLEM

Everything is “somewhere” — and nowhere in particular.

Searching

Half an hour to find something that was two metres away.

Bought twice

Because nobody knew one was already there — or where.

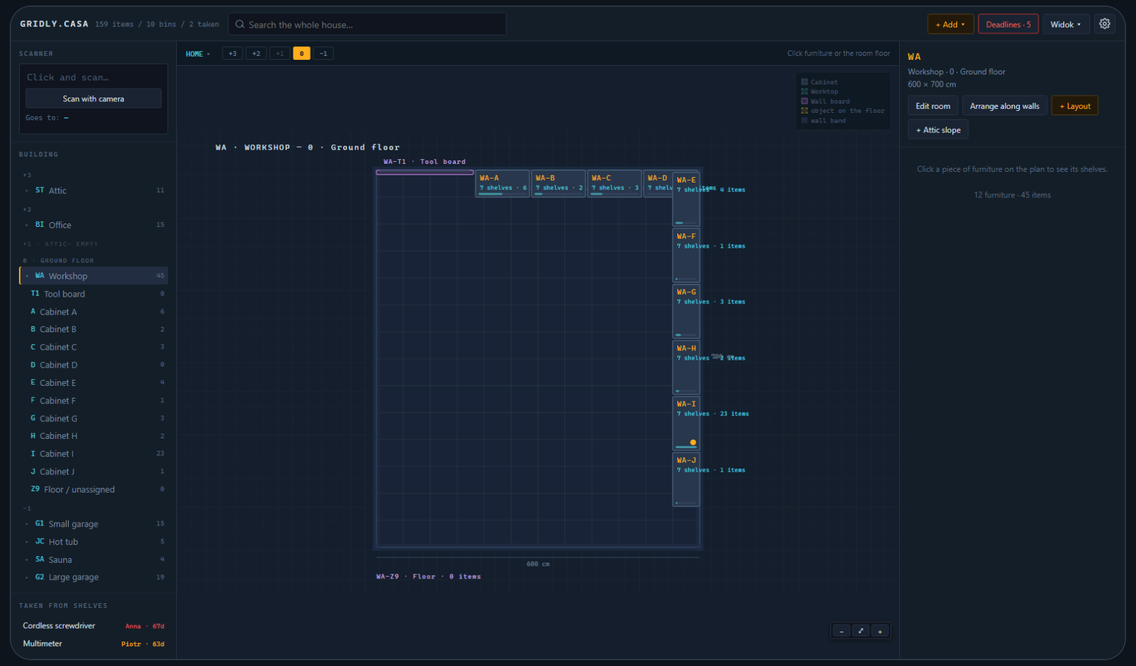

Missed dates

Inspections, warranties and expiry dates pass quietly.

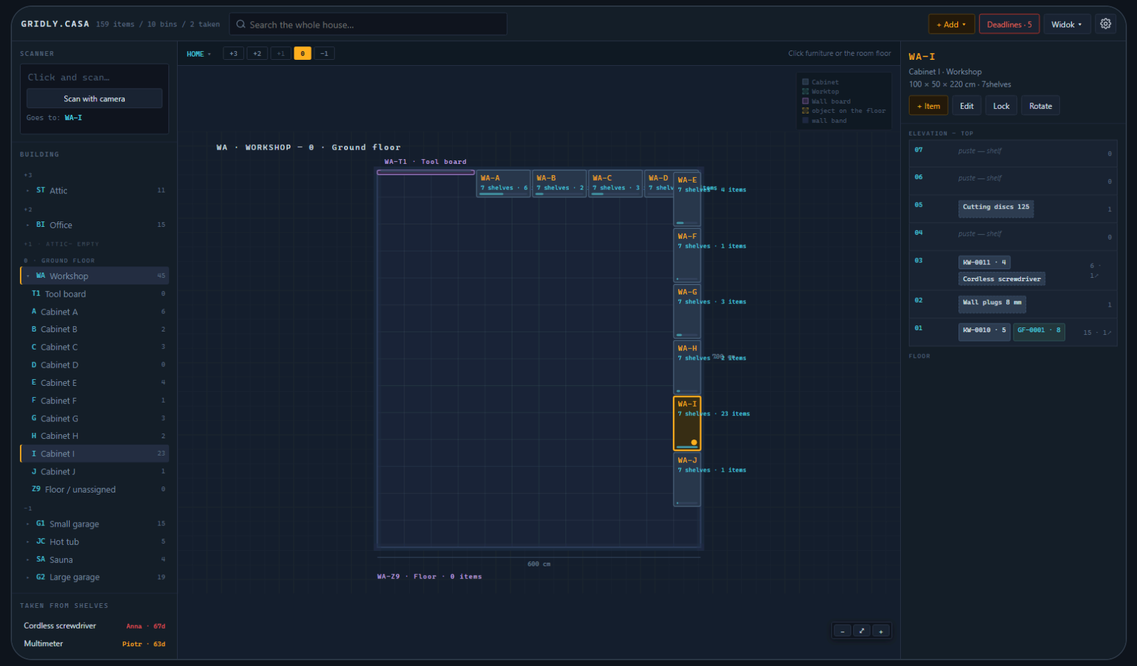

THE PLAN

Three clicks from building to shelf

Floor, room, cabinet, shelf. The plan is drawn in centimetres, so an address like WA-I-03 is a place you can walk to.

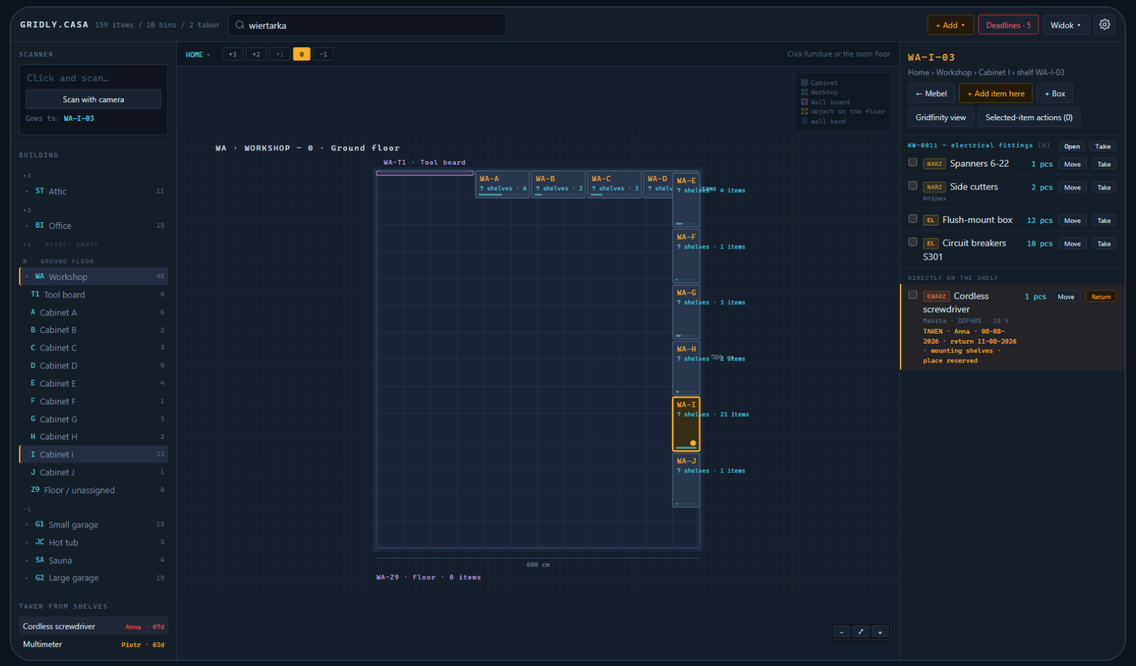

Workshop — pick a cabinet

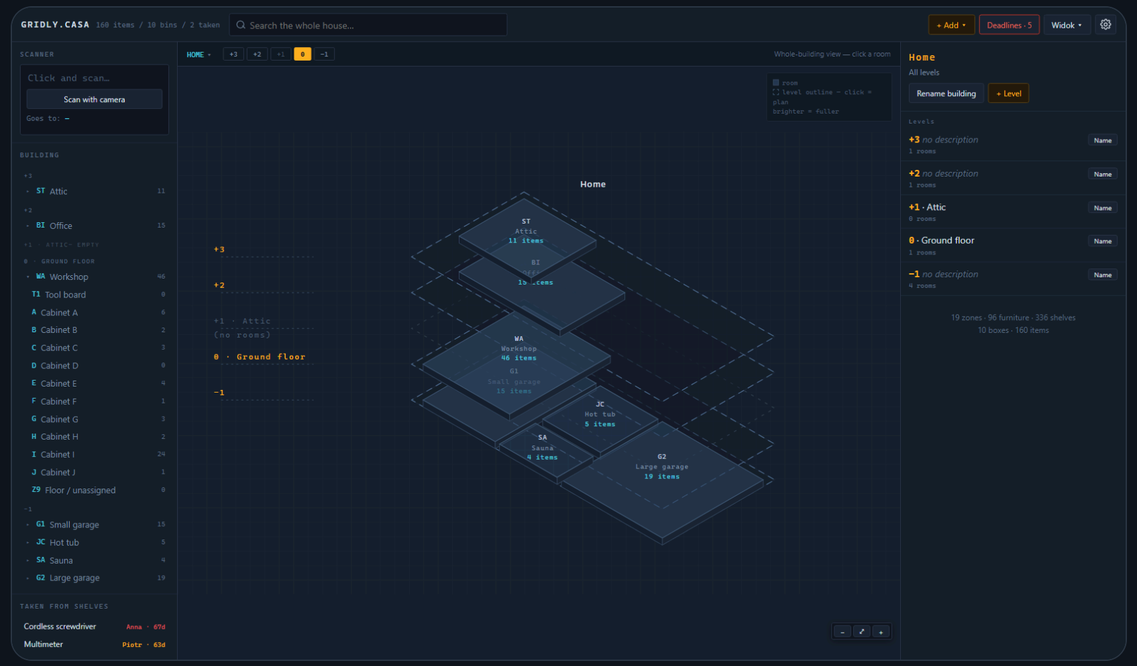

Cabinet I — every shelf and what is on it

EVERYDAY USE

Search lands you on the shelf. A scan replaces typing.

One search box for the whole house — name, brand, model or place code. The result is the shelf, not a list.

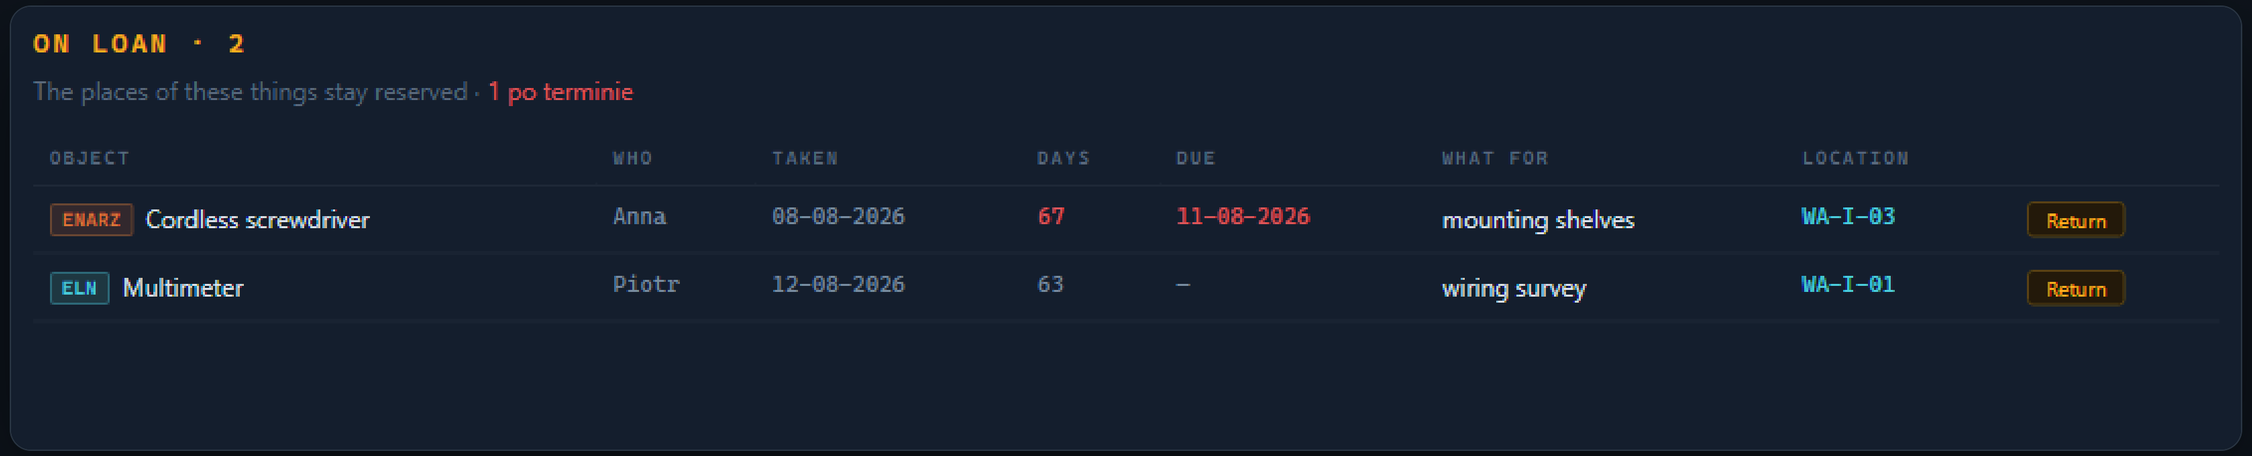

QR codes on shelves and boxes. Your phone camera, in the browser — no app to install, no signal needed.

LOAN REGISTER

Who took it, since when, and what for

A tool taken off the shelf does not disappear — it changes state, keeps its place reserved and gets a return date.

Who and what for

Days on loan, in red when overdue

Return in one click, back to its shelf

Always in the register, with date and name

STAY ON TOP

Nothing leaves the shelf unnoticed

Register — every add, loan and use, with date and name. It cannot be wiped from inside the program.

Shopping — minimum stock per item; the list builds itself.

Deadlines — inspections, warranties, expiry dates in one list.

GRIDFINITY

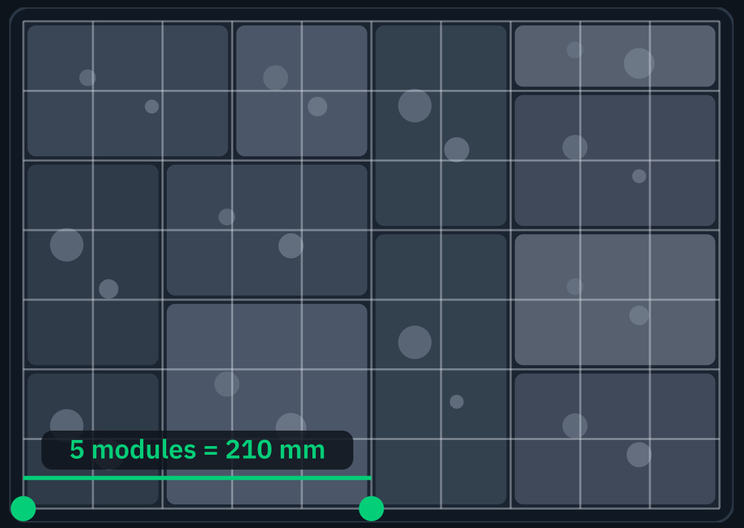

Map every bin of your drawer

Gridfinity is the open modular storage system built on a 42 mm grid. Gridly lays that grid over a photo of your drawer — you decide what each bin holds.

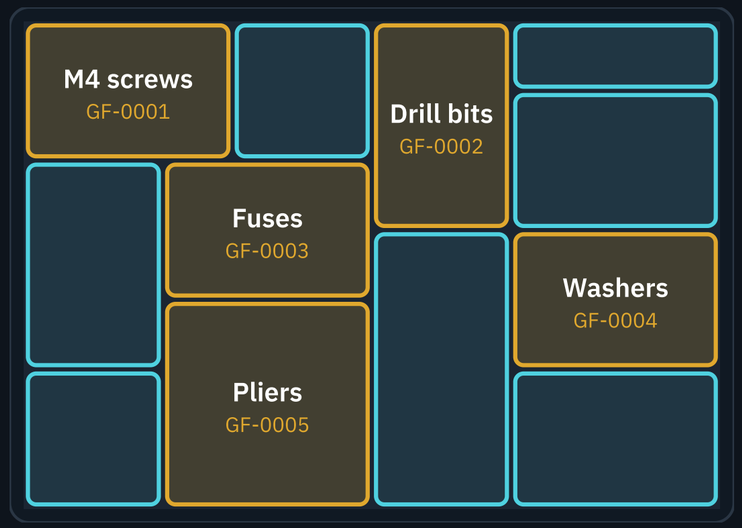

1 Photograph the drawer

2 Calibrate the grid

Click two points a known number of modules apart.

3 Outline the bins

Gridly traces the bin edges from the photo. It does not recognise what is inside — you name each bin or link it to a box code.

Illustration. The labels are typed by you. Stacked bins are supported as layers.

3D PRINTING

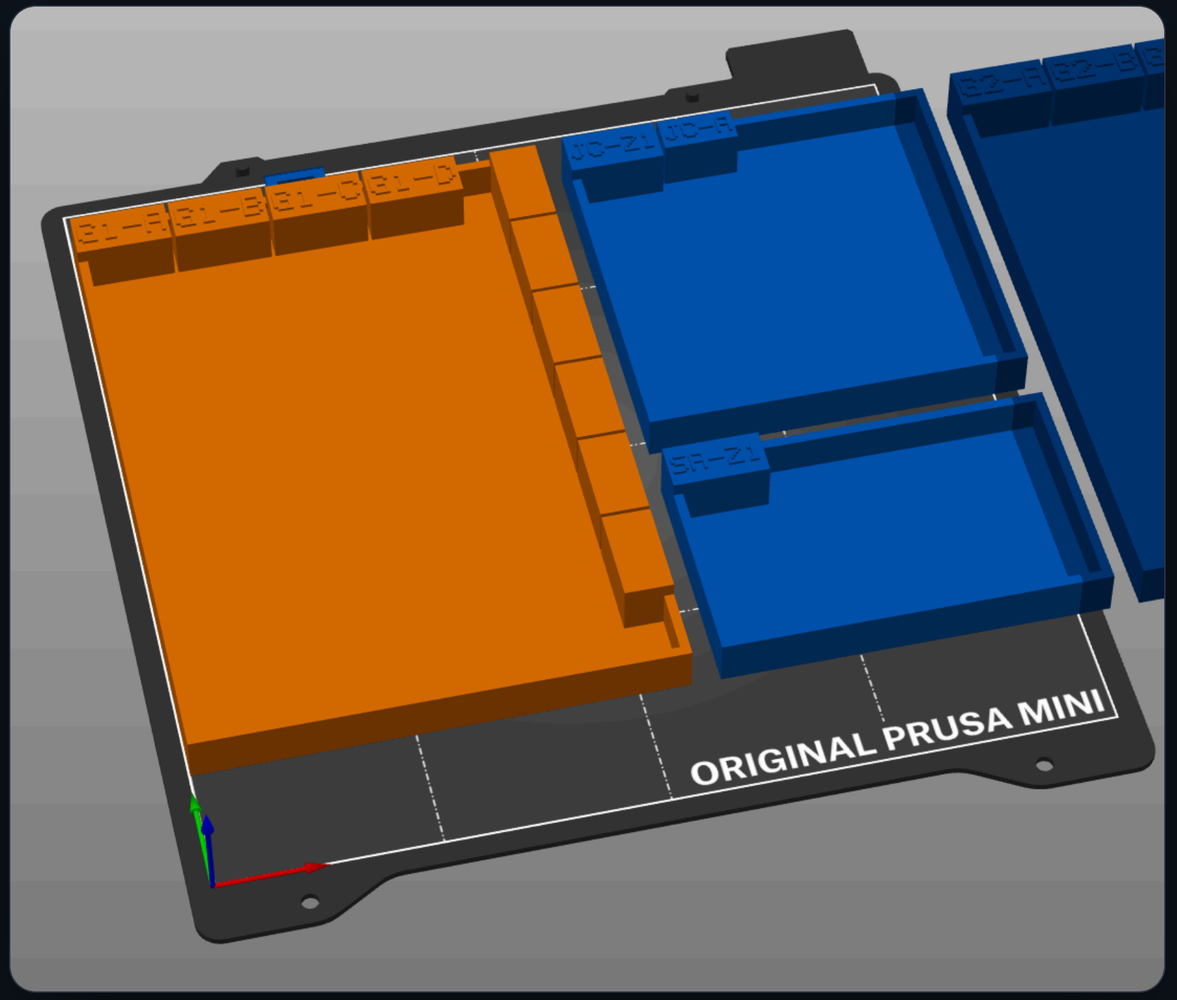

Print a scale model of your house

Each level becomes a printable plan at 1:50: floor slab, low walls with gaps at the doors, stepped stairs.

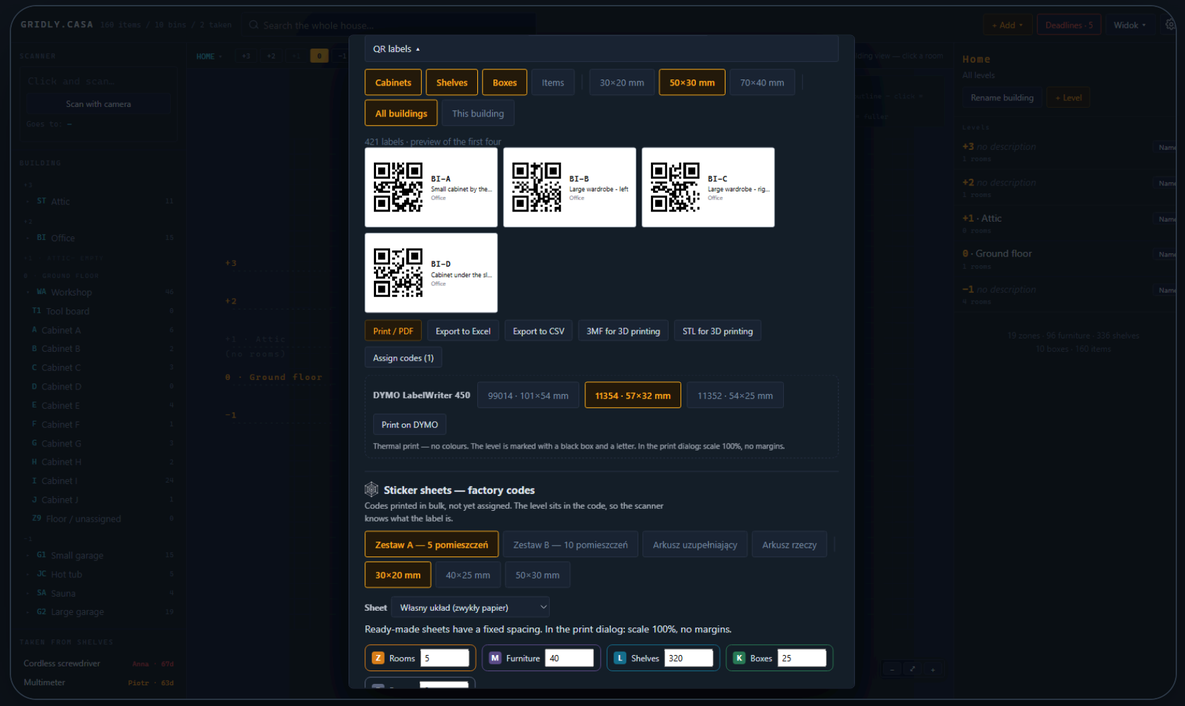

Furniture is printed as blocks with its code on top — the same code as the QR label on the real cabinet.

3MF for 3D printing STL for 3D printing

One click in Export. QR labels can also be printed as small plates.

Exported level models in the slicer, laid out on a Prusa MINI bed.

ON PAPER

Labels that survive a power cut

QR labels for shelves, boxes and cabinets — on an ordinary printer sheet or a DYMO roll, in three sizes.

Cabinet cards for the door, order cards for the supplier. Tick them off with a pen.

When the power fails, the paper is still there — and you still know what is where.

MOVING & SHARING

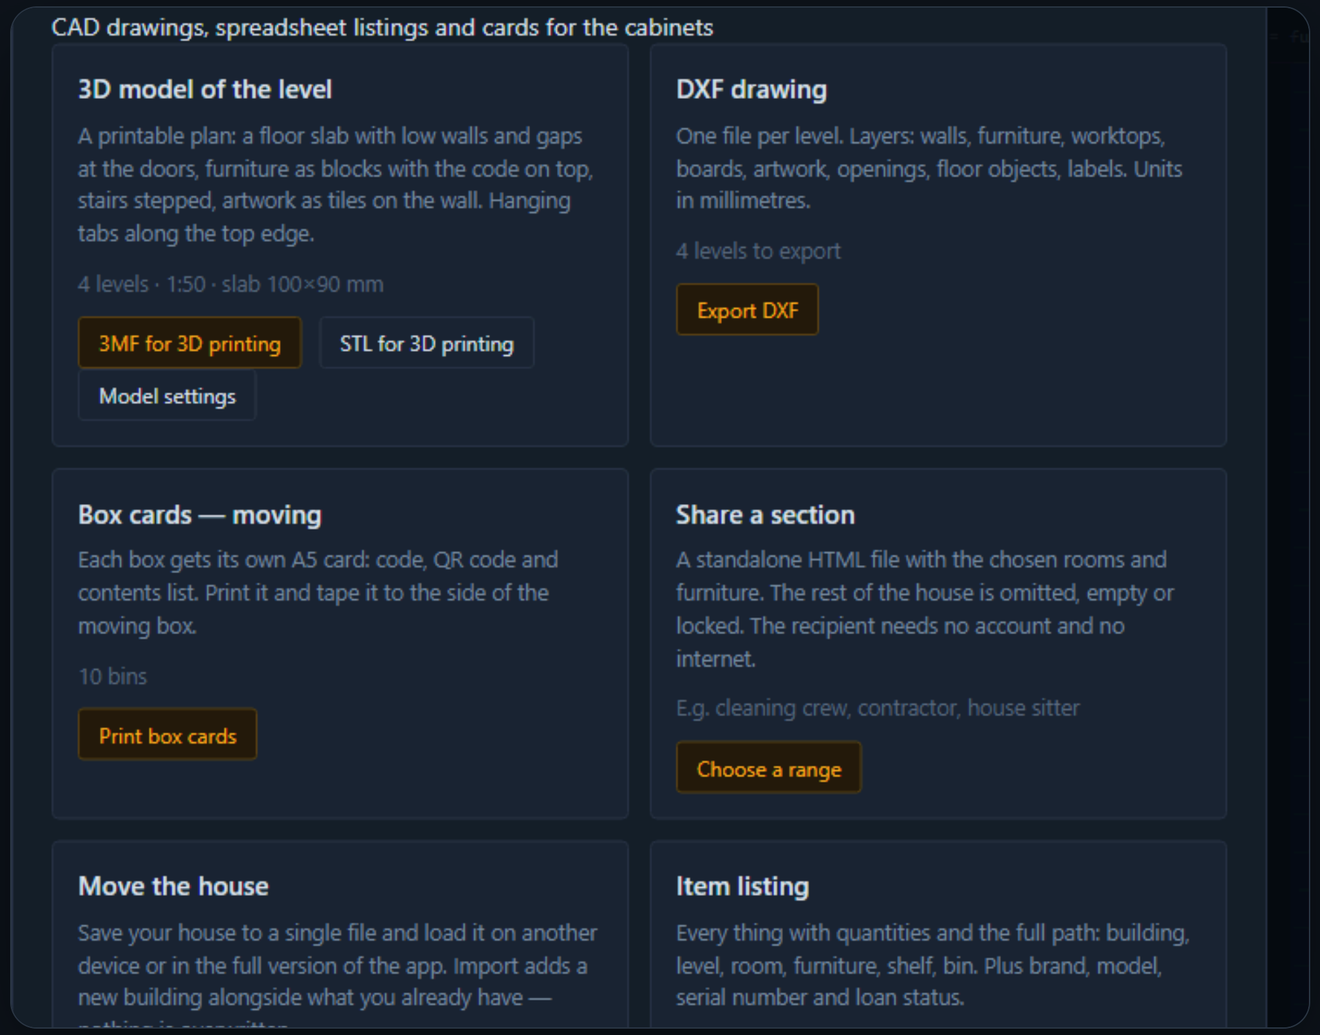

Moving house? Every box has a card.

Box cards — an A5 card per box with a code, a QR code and the contents list. Tape it to the side.

Move the house — the whole house in one file; load it on another device without overwriting anything.

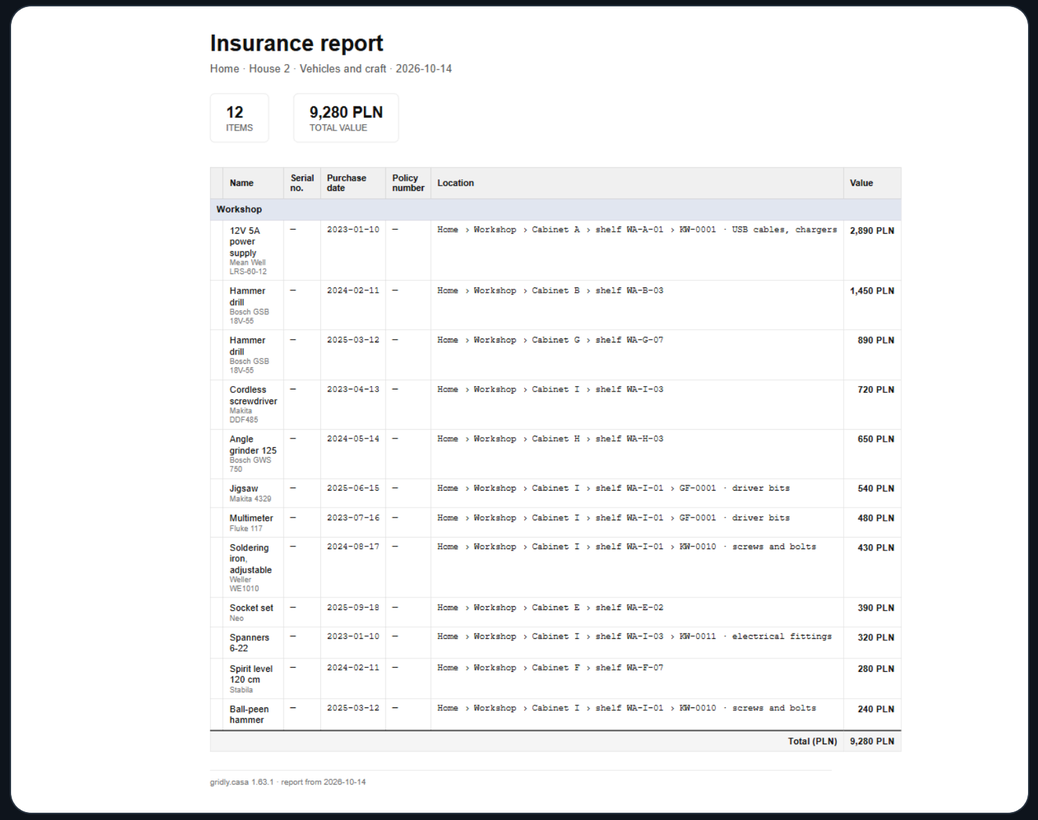

Share a section — rooms or one cabinet as a standalone file for a cleaner, a contractor or a house sitter. No account, no internet.

Restrict access — down to a single cabinet.

REPORTS & EXPORT

HONEST LIMITS

What Gridly is not — so you don’t plan around it

Not a document vault

It is an inventory of things, not a file repository. No revisions, review rounds or PDF markup.

Not a cloud service

No server, so no sign-in and no password recovery. The file is yours.

No email alerts

Nothing is sent out. Deadlines are on screen, not in your inbox.
